It is written, “I was then His nursing; I was then His delight every day, playing before Him at all times, playing in the inhabited areas of His earth. My delights are with the sons of man” (Proverbs 8:30-31). The Sages have said, “Nine hundred and seventy-four generations before the creation of the world, the Torah was written and placed in the bosom of the Holy One, blessed be He, and it sang with the ministering angels, as it is written: ‘I was then His delight every day, playing before Him at all times.’ “We need to understand why the Holy One, blessed be He, rejoiced in the Torah during all that time, only giving it to man after a thousand generations. We must say that by this statement, Hashem is teaching everyone on earth that although the Torah was written 1,000 generations earlier, He never ceased to rejoice in it each day, and He found, as it were, more jewels in it in which He did not find before. Now if such is the case for the Holy One, blessed be He, how much more does it apply for those born of women? Even if they were to live as long as the earth, they still would be unable to understand the equivalent of a single drop of water from the sea. The Torah’s words are compared to water, as it is written: “Everyone who is thirsty, go to the water” (Isaiah 55:1), for just as water has no end, the Torah’s words have no end.

The Sages have said, “It is impossible for a Beit Midrash to exist without finding new things in it [the Torah].” It is also said, “I will walk in broad pathways” (Psalms 119:45). Rashi explains that King David walked about freely in vastly. Similarly, the holy Torah is tremendously vast and no man can say, “I have reached the end of the Torah and understand it all.” Even with his tremendous wisdom, King Solomon stated: “I said, ‘I will be wise,’ but it was far from me. What existed is elusive and so very deep. Who can fathom it?” (Ecclesiastes 7:23-24). Scripture states, “G-d gave wisdom and considerable understanding to Solomon, and greatness of heart as the sand upon the seashore” (I Kings 5:9), and the Sages explained that Solomon’s wisdom exceeded the wisdom of all Israel, who are compared to the sand of the sea in number, as it is written: “The number of the Children of Israel will be like the sand of the sea” (Hosea 2:1). Nevertheless, Solomon’s wisdom was still greater. In fact if his wisdom were placed on once side of the scale and theirs on the other, his wisdom would outweigh theirs. Despite all this, his wisdom was not greater than the Torah’s, and he could not penetrate its deepest meanings. Even Moses, the father of the prophets — concerning whom the Sages have said that Hashem taught him Scripture, Mishnah, Halachot, Talmud, Tosaphot, Aggadot, and everything that every Torah scholar would ever say before his teacher — even from Moses the words of the Torah were hidden, for he did not completely understand them during his lifetime.

This is alluded to by a teaching of the Sages, for they said: “The Holy One, blessed be He, created the world only for the sake of three things that are called reshith: The Torah, Israel, and the fear of Heaven.” Why are they called reshith? It is because they have a beginning, but not an end. As soon as a person enters the Beit Midrash to study Torah, he can no longer stop studying by thinking: “I’ve reached the end of the Torah,” for King Solomon, the wisest of all men, would contradict him. Similarly, it is impossible for a person to achieve a complete fear of Heaven in this world, for no one feared Heaven more than Moses. In fact the Gemara states, “For Moses it [the fear of Heaven] was a small matter” (Berachot 33b). Nevertheless the verse states: “Because you did not believe Me to sanctify Me” (Numbers 20:12), which implies that Moses was lacking something. The Children of Israel are also called reshith, thereby teaching us that the Jewish people will never be destroyed. In other words, it has a beginning but not an end, as it is written: “Yet despite all this, when they are in the land of their enemies I will not cast them away, nor will I loathe them to destroy them utterly” (Leviticus 26:44). Generally speaking, no person can say, “I’ve finished the Torah.” If the Holy One, blessed be He — Who studied it for 1,000 generations and rejoiced in it during all that time — could say, “It has not become old before Me,” how much more can a being of flesh and blood find jewels in it as he digs! In fact the Mishnah states, “Turn it over and over again, for everything is in it” (Pirkei Avoth 5:21). The wisdom of the Torah differs from all other forms of wisdom. The more a person familiarizes himself with other forms of wisdom, the more he understands them, until he finally discovers their ultimate meaning. As for the Torah, the more discovers a person makes and the more he plumbs its depths, the more he realizes just how deep it is! Even King Solomon did not realize this before having studied much more than any other Jew. The greater a person is, the more he realizes that the Torah is infinite. Thus it is written: “Its measure is longer than the earth and broader than the sea” (Job 11:9).

We should not think that in the future, all Jews will know Torah and nobody will have to study it, for it is written: “Torah shall emanate from Me” (Isaiah 51:4). The Sages have interpreted this to mean: “New Torah explanations shall emanate from Me.” This teaches us that even in the future, Hashem will uncover new Torah teachings for us, and therefore the holy Torah will never have an end; it has only a beginning. Just as the Torah is eternal and without end, the Jewish people are eternal and without end, as it is written: “The eternity of Israel does not lie!” (I Samuel 15:29).

This is why Hashem began the Torah with the term bereshith, which can be divided into be-re-shith. This teaches us that the world was created for two (beit) things that are called reshith, meaning the Torah and Israel. Rashi states: “This verse calls for a midrashic interpretation. … As our rabbis stated, [G-d created the world] for the sake of the Torah, which is called reshith dawkhe ‘the beginning of His way’ — Proverbs 8:22, and for the sake of Israel, who are called resshith tevuah [‘the first of His crop’ — Jeremiah 2:3].” If one were to ask why the word reshith is cited two (beit) times, whereas above it is stated that the world was created on account of three things (Torah, Israel, and the fear of Heaven), the answer is that the Torah and Israel will never change, not even in the era of Mashiach. As we have said, they will never have an end, only a beginning (reshith). Yet the fear of Heaven will change in the future world, during the era of Mashiach, as the Rambam writes: “During that time understanding, wisdom, and truth will prevail, as it is written: ‘The earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the L-RD as the waters cover the sea’ [Isaiah 11:9].” We also read, “They shall no longer teach — each man his fellow, each man his brother — saying, ‘Know the L-RD,’ for they shall all know Me, from the least of them to the greatest of them, says the L-RD” (Jeremiah 31:33). It is also stated, “I will remove the heart of stone from your flesh and give you a heart of flesh” (Ezekiel 36:26). Therefore in the future, all Jews will be equal in their fear of Heaven. No one will fear G-d more than anyone else, and everyone will know Him, from the smallest to the greatest. This is because everyone will be able to perceive Him, and the fear of Heaven will be equal among them all. There will therefore be an end to the fear of Heaven during the era of Mashiach, but not an end to Torah or Israel. Thus it is stated bereshith, for two (beit) things that are called reshith — the Torah and Israel — which have only a beginning, not an end.
Holy Garments

It is written, “The L-RD G-d made for the man and his wife coats of skin, and He clothed them” (Genesis 3:21).

The Sages have said, “This teaches us that the Holy One, blessed be He, made them priestly garments” (Baal HaTurim). The Midrash states, “They were garments of honor, which subsequent firstborn used” (Bamidbar Rabba 4:8). Why did the first man wear priestly garments, since nobody at the time officiated in the Sanctuary? Furthermore, why did He wear garments of honor, ones befitting Shabbat, during the weekday?

This subject is explained in Sefer HaAkeida (end of article nine): “The Holy One, blessed be He, made for the man and his wife coats of skin, and He clothed them. This means that just as a garment is connected to the body…the light of the Torah, its mitzvot, and its warnings are a means for them to…rectify what the serpent ruined and return to a correct understanding of good and evil. It is written vayalbishem [’and He clothed them’], much as it written: ‘And a spirit lavsha [clothed] Amasai’ [I Chronicles 12:19].”

This means that Hashem in His goodness gave man the ability to conquer the temptations of the physical world. These garments provide him with strength, as it is written: “Who is strong? He who controls his inclination.” Hence these garments were considered as priestly garments, which also possessed the ability to sanctify the priest who wears them, as it is written: “These are holy garments” (Leviticus 16:4). Therefore we read, “They shall be upon Aaron’s heart” (Exodus 28:30), meaning that these priestly garments left a permanent impression on the heart of the priest, in order for his heart to control his desires. The Sefat Emet said, “The priestly garments are meant to influence the bodily members, for it is certain that all the bodily members of Aaron, Hashem’s chosen one, changed when he became like an angel of Hashem…. The brilliance of these garments left a mark on the body of this tzaddik…so he could control all the desires of his heart in order that forgetfulness would not overcome him” (Sefat Emet, Tetzaveh 644).

Hence from this point of view, the first man is similar to an angel because of the garments that Hashem gave to him, for they rectified all his bodily members. They left an indelible impression on his heart so he could control his desires. As for ourselves, every morning we recite the blessing: “Blessed are You…who girds Israel with might.” Modest garments leave an impression on man, and through them he is girded with the strength to conquer his instincts and control the desires of his heart. This is the power that the Holy One, blessed be He, gave to Adam and Eve when He provided them with garments and clothed them.

Primary and Secondary Concerns

It is written, “In the beginning, G-d created the heavens and the earth” (Genesis 1:1).

The Midrash cites Rabbi Yitzchak as saying that when a man of flesh and blood constructs a palace, he first builds a lower level and then a higher level. However the Holy One, blessed be He, built the heavens before the earth. By doing so, He taught us that people are not right by building, while in their youth, a “lower level” by concerning themselves only with material concerns, and then to build a “higher level” by working on their souls when they grow older. The Holy One, blessed be He, showed us what we should really do, which is to concentrate on Heaven first (spirituality) and then on the earth (materiality), in order that we may learn from Him to concern ourselves first about our souls, and then about our bodies.

Prejudice and Strife

It is written, “And G-d made the firmament” (Genesis 1:7).

The Gemara cites Rabbi Chisda as teaching, “Since the day that the Temple was destroyed, there has never been a perfectly clear sky” (Berachot 59a). The firmament alludes to strife, and all who are involved in a conflict generally say that they are fighting for the sake of Heaven. In reality, however, since the Temple was destroyed no dispute is completely pure, without any trace of personal interest.

The Greatness of Peace

It is written, “G-d called la-rakia [the firmament] shamayim [Heaven]” (Genesis 1:8).

The reason why the name “firmament” did not please the Holy One, blessed be He, is because it is a symbol of strife. It separated the upper waters from the lower waters, and therefore Hashem refused to use this name. Instead He called it by a name composed of esh (fire) and mayim (water). This demonstrates that the world can only endure in this way, namely when people who are polar opposites by nature – much like fire and water – come together. The Holy One, blessed be He, wanted the inhabitants of the earth to see a name that indicates unity, and to draw a lesson from it.

Everything is Known Beforehand

It is written, “Let the waters beneath the heaven be gathered into one place, and let the dry land appear” (Genesis 1:9).

When the sea split during the Exodus, the Torah states that in the morning it returned to its strength (le-etano). The Sages explain the term le-etano to mean that Hashem imposed a condition (tnai) on Creation which compelled the sea to split before the Children of Israel. We need to understand where this condition is alluded to in the Torah. From the above verse, the Sages learned that once the waters were gathered into one place, it is obvious that the dry land appeared. Therefore why did Scripture explicitly state this fact? The answer is that Hashem issued a command: “Now that the waters have gathered together, I impose on Creation the condition that when necessary, the dry land will appear never studied it before, as our Sages have said: “May the words of the Torah not seem to you as an old decree that no one respects, but rather as a new work, one to which everyone turns.” Just as the Holy One, blessed be He, renews each day the work of Creation, so too must a person constantly renew the Torah, for the sake of which the world was created and in which it is stated bereshith.
in place of the sea.” Thus it is written, “The Children of Israel walked on dry land in the midst of the sea” (Exodus 14:29).

The War Against the Evil Inclination

It is written, “Sin is crouching at the door. Its desire is toward you, and you will conquer it” (Genesis 4:7).

When the evil inclination approaches a person to make him sin, it stands at the door like a needy person. This is what constitutes “sin is crouching at the door.” At first it places itself at your door, yet “its desire is toward you” – it yearns to completely devour you. Therefore when you see that it is still at the door, you must immediately “conquer it” and chase it away. “Its desire is toward you, and you will conquer it” means that although the evil inclination was created and sent by Hashem to push man to sin, its true goal is to be defeated by man. This is what constitutes, “The wicked watches the righteous and desires to kill him” (Psalms 37:32). The “wicked” is the evil inclination, and “desires to kill him” means that it wants the righteous to kill it. Thus it is written: “Its desire is toward you.” What is its desire? That “you will conquer it.”

When the Mouth and Heart are at Odds

It is written, “Cain spoke with his brother Abel. … Cain rose up against his brother Abel and killed him” (Genesis 4:8).

The verse does not tell us what Cain said to his brother Abel, and in reality he said nothing to him. He simply acted like a brother, appearing to be a loving sibling, which is why Abel was not suspicious of him. Thus Cain was able to kill him, even though Abel was the stronger of the two. After Abel was murdered, Hashem said to Cain: “Where is Abel your brother?” In other words, where has your brotherly love gone? Cain replied, “I do not know. Am I my brother’s keeper?” That is, even when I called him “my brother,” I did not know if I would be able to fulfill the words of my mouth and truly act as a brother.

Overview of the Parsha

The book of Genesis recounts the story of man and the earth as a backdrop to the creation of the Jewish people, who appear later in the book of Exodus. Parsha Bereshith deals with the creation of the world and humanity until its devastation, meaning from Adam until Noah. During the first three days of Creation, G-d establishes and divides the foundations of the universe into “heavens,” “earth,” and “seas,” and He fills them in the following three days with all the hosts of the heavens and earth. At the end of this work, Hashem rests on the seventh day and blesses and sanctifies it. The development of Creation begins with man, the earth, and the Garden of Eden. Though he gives names to the other creatures, Adam finds none that is a suitable helper for him, and so Hashem forms a woman from his side. The serpent’s seduction through the intermediary of the woman leads to the sin of eating from the Tree of Knowledge, which damages the bond between man and the earth. Lest man eat from the Tree of Life, he is chased from the garden. Adam and his wife produce Cain and Abel, and following the murder of the latter in the first human confrontation, the bond between Cain and the earth deteriorates even further. Cain is exiled from the land as humanity begins to build cities and fashion tools from the time of Cain until Enosh. Scripture lists Cain’s descendants, followed by the descendants of Adam (from whom Israel would emerge) until the time of Noah, who brings consolation for the desolation of the earth. In Noah’s generation, the evil committed by man reaches such a level that Hashem decides to wipe man and all life off the face of the earth.

ESHET HAYIL

Indispensable

The manna descended for the Children of Israel by the merit of Moses, the clouds of glory appeared by the merit of Aaron the priest, and the people were provided with water by the merit of Miriam. We need to understand exactly why water, which is indispensable to life, is attributed to Miriam’s merit. From here we learn a great lesson concerning a woman’s role in the Jewish home, of which she is the focal point. She is constantly with her children, raising them from their first days on earth. By her own conduct she establishes the foundations of the Jewish home in regards to modesty and kashrut, as well as with acts of generosity and kindness by practicing hospitality and other mitzvot. Hence she is compared to water, which is absolutely indispensable to life.

Rabbi Eliezer Yaakov Chabash

Rabbi Eliezer Yaakov Chabash Zatzal took the first initiatives that resulted in the "kollel" concept of Torah study. He also tapped into financial resources that allowed yeshivot to be established in Lithuania. He used his tremendous influence on the great benefactor of Berlin, Rabbi Dvadia Lehman, to establish a kollel. His brother Rabbi Chaim Yosef of Berlin became a close friend of Rabbi Dvadia Lehman, and he was given the authority to use his wealth to cover all the expenses of the Slabodka yeshiva. Yet in the home of this man, who distributed millions of dollars to others, poverty reigned. His family actually suffered from hunger, though he didn’t worry about his children. He had much greater and more important worries. "The students of Torah," he would say, "are the only ones who still adhere to Judaism in our time, and we have to support them and enable them to survive. And the more money there is, the greater the number of yeshivot and students of Torah there will be." This is precisely what happened, for he supplied every new yeshiva with its initial funds, and yet no one knew about it! Who would have revealed this to anyone? Certainly not him! His body was a living contradiction to the adage, "A holy soul in a holy body," for he was nothing more than skin and bones. He was like a broken pot, sick and frail, and yet his soul dwelled in this "living skeleton" for 77 years. He displayed an indomitable spirit, one that never knew fatigue. Although he was a generous spender when it came to the needs of the Jewish community, he was extremely stingy when it came to his own needs. In everything concerning the material realm, he never worried about his body, sick and broken though it was. When he reached the age of 70, he decided to renounce this world and occupy himself with his sinful soul. Rabbi Eliezer Yaakov suddenly disappeared, only to be found later in synagogue. When he was asked about what he would live on, he said: "Hashem will help." In fact Hashem did help him, for every day a found a righteous woman who brought him something to eat.

At the time of his death, his will contained some important documents. Naturally these was not financial documents, but slips of paper on which he jotted down some advice and good habits that he had received from the gaon Rabbi Israel Salanter Zatzal. As an inheritance, he left his children a beautiful pair of tefillin and...a torn tallit.

THE DESERT’S HOPE

It is written, “In the beginning, G-d created the heavens and the earth” (Genesis 1:1).

The Sages have said, “Why is the earth called eretz? It is because it razta (wanted) to do the Creator’s will.” That is, the earth yearns to reveal Hashem’s glory in the world.

During the Second World War, the Rav of Tchebin, the gaon Rabbi Dov Weidenfeld Zatzal (the author of Responsa Dovev Meisharim), was exiled from Galatia into Russia, and in Russia the Soviets exiled him to Siberia, where he remained for years. With him in exile was the Maggid Rabbi Yaakov Galinsky Shlita. Rabbi Yaakov recounted that one day, as the Rav of Tchebin was carrying out the work that the Russians imposed on him under freezing conditions, he turned to him and said: “Rabbi Yaakov, Shabbat is now beginning. Let’s start reciting Kabalat Shabbat.” As they began reciting Lechu neranena, their hearts were deeply troubled and hidden from us will then be radiant.

THE MEANING OF KADISH

The voice of Hashem makes the desert tremble; Hashem causes the desert to be heard in the desert, which has been yearning for countless years for Hashem’s Name. This is what all created things long to do: To sanctify the Name of Hashem in the world. Now that we have arrived, in a roundabout way, to this desert at the ends of the earth, ‘The voice of Hashem makes the desert hope.’ Here in this wasteland we can hear G-d’s sacred Name, so let us glorify Hashem with great joy. Let us rejoice in the desert!” Both of them then raised their voice and sang with tearful emotion.

THE TRUE STORY

A True Story

The Desert’s Hope

Rabbi Zemira departed from the village of Ono, and in a crevice in one of the valleys of Mount Ararat he saw a flame shooting up. He inclined his ear and heard some voices. An Arab said to him, “Come with me, and I will show you wonders that are hidden from men.” He followed him behind a rock and saw other crevices from which flames were also shooting up. Other voices could be heard as well, and the Arab said to him: “Listen carefully.” He inclined his ear and heard voices saying, “Oy! Oy!” At that point he said, “This is certainly Gehinnom.” The Arab departed and remained at a distance. In the meantime, Rabbi Zemira went to another place and saw a man screaming loudly. He was being led to another crevice and was about to be lowered into the depths, never to be seen again. Rabbi Zemira fell asleep and saw this man in a dream. In the dream he asked the man, “Who are you?” to which he replied: “I am a sinful Jew who committed every possible transgression in this world.” Rabbi Zemira asked him, “What is your name?” and he replied: “I don’t know, for those condemned to Gehinnom do not remember their names.” He asked, “Where are you from?” and he replied: “I was from Upper Galilee, and because of the numerous sins that I committed, I was judged three times by day and three times by night.” Rabbi Zemira arose from his sleep and traveled to Upper Galilee. He heard a boy saying: “Seek justice, seek humility. Perhaps you will be saved.” He asked who the wicked man was, and the boy said to him: “Rabbi, may such and such evil befall that man, for he committed every possible sin in the world. May it all befall that wicked man and the wet nurse who fed him.”

Rabbi Zemira asked, “Did he leave a son behind?” He replied, “He left a son who is as wicked as him, a boy who goes to the slaughterhouse.” Rabbi Zemira looked for him, took him and taught him Torah, Scripture, and Kriat Shema. Then he taught him Mishnah, Talmud, Halachot and Aggadot, until he became very wise. This was none other than Nahum HaPakoli. – Zohar (Cited in Shimrit HaLashon)

IT IS WRITTEN, “I WILL LEAD THE BLIND ON A WAY THEY NEVER KNEW. I WILL HAVE THEM WALK ON PATHS THEY DID NOT KNOW. I WILL TURN DARKNESS INTO LIGHT BEFORE THEM, AND MAKE THE CROOKED PLACES STRAIGHT” (Isaiah 42:16).

We may explain this passage according to a statement made by the Sages: “‘This is the law of the Torah’ [Numbers 19:2]. I have laid down a statute, I have issued a decree. You are not allowed to transgress My decree” [Bamidbar Rabbah 19:8]. Furthermore, concerning the verse, “It is not an empty thing for you” (Deuteronomy 32:47), they have said that if it is empty, it is because of you. In fact there are some mitzvot whose reasons we understand, and there are others whose reasons are hidden from us. We must realize, however, that all the mitzvot are for our good, and the Torah’s warnings to us are like reliable advisors, as it is written: “Your testimonies are my delight and my advisors” (Psalms 119:24).

King David called all 613 mitzvot his advisors because they are all for our good. Yet this applies only when man has the right vantage point, as was the case before the sin. Yet after the sin, he was completely changed, though the mitzvot retained their initial form. This is because they are an eternal law, and therefore the fact that we cannot understand how they are for our good does not indicate a deficiency in the mitzvot. Instead, since man’s condition changed after the sin, we are no longer in a position to understand the mitzvot. Thus in the future the verse, “I will lead the blind on a way they never knew” will be fulfilled in us. Hashem will open our eyes and reveal the Torah’s reasons to us, at which point the mitzvot will appear as sweet as honey. What had previously been dark and hidden from us will then be radiant.
